Rediscover jesus matthew kelly pdf

At a time when so many people are spiritually disillusioned and looking for ways to live, love, work and play that nourish the soul rather than destroy it, Matthew Kelly once again offers a powerful book that encourages us in our weariness, challenges us in our comfort, and invites us to rediscover the beautiful possibilities that God poses before us every day. Rediscovering Jesus is a profound invitation to seek deeply personal answers to our deeply personal questions. Each page seems to effortlessly reach every aspect of our lives, providing spiritual wisdom and practical insights that help us get to know both Jesus and ourselves in a new way. Some books find us at the right time, and those books change our lives forever. Rediscovering Jesus is one of those books. How well do you know Jesus? I think about it a lot, and I always come to the same realization. I don't know Jesus anywhere as well as I would like to know him. There is desire, but life gets in the way. There are times when I feel like I'm making great progress, and other times when I wonder if I know him at all. But I always come to the same inspiring and disturbing idea: if there is one person that each of us should know in a deeply personal way, it is Jesus the carpenter of Nazareth, the itinerant preacher, the Son of God, the King of Kings and the Lord of Lords, the Lamb of God, the new Adam, the Messiah, the Alpha and the Omega, the Chosen One, the Light of the World, the God Man who wants good things for us more than we want them for ourselves, the healer of our soul. Each generation produces a handful of leaders who change the game in the Church, and Matthew Kelly is certainly one of our own. Matthew was born in Sydney, Australia, hence his enviable accent that makes everything he says brilliant seem brilliant, and he began to talk and write in his late teens while attending business school. Since then, he has become one of the most successful speakers in the world. Matthew runs a Chicago-based management consulting firm called Floyd Consulting and his clients include Procter and Gamble, Chick-fil-A, General Electric, Pepsi, FedEx, HSBC, the Department of Defense, McDonalds, US Bank, 3M, Ernst & Young, the U.S. Navy, the U.S. Air Force and dozens of other Fortune 500 companies. Among Catholics, however, Matthew is best known for his powerful speech, dynamic Catholic ministry, and bestselling books. More than four million people attended its seminars and presentations in more than fifty countries. In 2009, Matthew founded Dynamic Catholic to re-energize the Catholic Church in America by developing world-class resources that inspire people to rediscover the genius of Catholicism. The ministry has done so through mega-best-selling books such as Rediscover Catholicism and The Four Signs of a Dynamic Catholic, parishes can buy for $2-3 each and faint at Easter and Christmas. Matthew's books have been published in languages, have appeared on the bestseller lists of the New York Times, Wall Street Journal and USA Today, and have sold over fifteen million copies. Next week, Matthew will release his new book called Rediscovering Jesus: An Invitation. Designed as the sequel to rediscover Catholicism, the book takes readers on a 40-day journey from knowledge of Jesus to his personal and intimate knowledge. Here's Matthew briefly presenting the book: [youtube id=1K8D9H41B8A] Today, as part of #RediscoverJesus's blog tour, I'm excited to sit down and Matthew and discuss the new book, the importance of developing a personal relationship with Jesus, and future plans for Dynamic Catholic. Enjoy! BRANDON VOGT: The mission or your organization. Dynamic Catholic, is to re-energize the Catholic Church in America and inspire people to rediscover the genius of Catholicism. How does Rediscovering Jesus fit into that mission? MATTHEW KELLY: When we embarked on the discovery of the difference between highly committed Catholics and disengaged Catholics, we found that the main difference was that very busy Catholics have a daily prayer routine. If we don't teach people to pray, nothing will change. To give energy to Catholics we must involve them, and this means teaching them to develop a daily prayer routine, helping them to develop a life-changing friendship with Jesus. BRANDON VOGT: Rediscover Jesus is the sequel to Rediscover Catholicism, which has sold more than seven million copies and is the best-selling Catholic book in American history, in addition to the Bible. How do the two books bond? What would you give to a fallen Catholic first? MATTHEW KELLY: Rediscovering Catholicism has focused on the genius of Catholicism and Catholic spirituality in general. Rediscovering Jesus consists in taking a new look at the life and teachings of Jesus Christ, making an inventory of our lives side by side with the Gospel, and embracing the challenge of growing up. Choosing the right book to give to some is an art that I think requires a real sense of what a particular person is struggling with. I think both of these books will meet the people where they are and lead them where God calls them to be. BRANDON VOGT: Your new book includes 40 short devotional entries instead of long narrative chapters. Why that format, with the 40-day trip? MATTHEW KELLY: When I was young, I wanted to write books that people would like to read. Now I want to write books that people will live on. When I write I constantly try to find a way to customize it for the reader, so that ideas can come to life in a person's life. The Church understands that our lives change when our habits change, and forty days is the perfect time to form new habits. BRANDON VOGT: The new evangelization seems on the king-. Recent Popes have encouraged us to re-propose, re-tell, remember and – according to your book – help people rediscover the splendour of Christ. But what re- assumes that people have already had some with Jesus, if perhaps a long time ago or superficially. Why do you think people need to rediscover Jesus? What distorted views of him need to be healed? MATTHEW KELLY: When I come back from a trip, however long or short, I have the joy of rediscovering my wife and children. It's a nice thing to rediscover people and places. In the same way it is a joy to rediscover the true Jesus and his true message. Sometimes it is the distorted views of Jesus that need to be healed, and sometimes we have to confront distorted opinions of ourselves. One of the essential problems of Christianity at this point in history is that most people think they are quite good Christians, even non-Christians. But compared to what? We find comparisons to comfort ourselves, but when we measure our lives against the Gospel we are called to change. BRANDON VOGT: Some Catholics are uncomfortable with the idea of pursuing a personal relationship with Jesus or knowing Jesus in a real and personal way. They think I sound too Protestant. It's true? MATTHEW KELLY: It's like saying coke isn't the original cola. Long before there was only one Protestant, the Saints had dynamic personal relationships with Jesus. I think after all, we all do it for a long time. I think a lot of people are uncomfortable because they know they don't have it, and more importantly, they don't know how to get it. I hope that Rediscovering Jesus will help many to develop it. BRANDON VOGT: In the book, the difference between knowing Jesus and knowing Jesus is emphasized. How do we make this transition? How do we really meet Jesus? MATTHEW KELLY: In ancient times, if you were a student you had a particular teacher, and you sat at his feet for many hours every day, learning. A disciple of Jesus needs to sit at his feet for at least a few minutes every day, to learn and be encouraged, to take instructions and to receive instructions for the day. We meet Jesus in many ways, but the daily encounter in prayer is essential if we are to progress spiritually. BRANDON VOGT: Although only available for pre-order, Rediscovering Jesus has climbed the bestseller lists, which means many people are buying it for themselves and friends. But what's the biggest plan for the book? Will it be part of the Dynamic Catholic Book Program? How can shepherds order copies for all their parish? MATTHEW KELLY: Yes, the concave will be published on August 17, and I don't know why, but I'm always surprised when a book hits all the bestseller lists. And yes, it will be available in the Dynamic Catholic Book Program this Christmas, so we hope many parishioners will give a copy to parishioners and visitors to Christmas Mass. This post is part of #RediscoverJesus blog post conducted by Dynamic Catholic. You can pre-order your copy of Rediscover Jesus on both Amazon.com. Readers who book the book by August 16, 2015, have the to win one several prizes, including a paid trip to Italy with Matteo and those underway the Dynamic Catholic Pilgrimage in Rome this November. To learn more about this sweepstakes, visit DynamicCatholic.com/RediscoverJesus/entry. Anyone who pre-orders the book will also have access to an exclusive webinar with Matthew, during which he will talk about his writing process, why he decided to write Rediscover Jesus, and why he thinks this is the most important book he has ever written.
